Cool Sitemapper is a sitemap generator for web engines like Google, yahoo, Ask or MSN. Easy and automatic XML sitemap files generation. You simply have to write the website URL and the program starts scanning it. You can generate the number of files you want and give them the name you want. You can enter the website URL and choose the options, like the type of files to put in the sitemap. The found URLs are written and you can see the processing state of progress. You can start at all URLs, just select the ones that you want to be in the sitemap. And you can select an interval for the script to exit. You can tell you want to generate the sitemap when the website is down, search for a string in the text of the website. You can also write the URL in the 'path' field that the program will look for. Cool Sitemapper Features: URL: You can enter any URL you want (with http or https), the path or the domain, and extensions. If there is a space in the URL, that part will be ignored. Location: You can enter the name of the directory the files are saved to. It will be created automatically. Count: You can enter the number of files to generate, and what type of file, if they are only images or only text files (xml). It will be found and saved. Filename: You can enter the name of the generated file. If not given, the filename is the URL. By default, the first URLs of the file will be used. You can also set an interval. Then Cool Sitemapper goes to the next URL, and so on. Interval: You can tell Cool Sitemapper to stop when it is done scanning, and have the script wait for a random time interval. Maybe you want to make sure the website is down before resuming. Type of files: You can tell Cool Sitemapper to generate text or image files, if there is something in the text of the site to be scanned. Example: etc... Show example:
